Is Your Employer Treating You Unfairly? Our Los Angeles Team Can Help.

You have likely devoted many of your waking hours to your job. You have worked hard and gone above and beyond, giving you a sense of pride and accomplishment. Now, despite your dedication and loyal service, your employer is treating you unfairly. You may even have been fired for no justifiable reason. This wrongful termination has devastated you and your family, and you understandably want justice. You need a legal representative to fight for you.

At The Spivak Law Firm, we are committed to making these situations right. Whether you have been retaliated against, wrongfully terminated, or been subject to any other type of discriminatory or unlawful treatment, our Los Angeles employment lawyers can provide you with the vigorous representation you deserve. We have over 25 years of legal experience and have obtained millions of dollars in judgments and settlements for our clients. Our team is not afraid to litigate complex cases and will work aggressively to recover the monetary compensation you are owed.

Championing the Rights of California Employees

If you know or suspect your employer is doing something illegal, you may be worried about the consequences of speaking out. While federal and state laws forbid employers from discriminating against an employee for complaining about or reporting possible unlawful activity, workplace retaliation is still common.

We can take legal action on your behalf in a court of law if you are wrongfully terminated or retaliated against for doing the right thing. Our team can also explore your legal options and work to negotiate a settlement if you are suffering from unlawful treatment at work. Depending on the circumstances of your case, we may be able to recover compensation for lost wages, interest, monetary penalties, lost benefits, damages for pain and suffering, legal fees, punitive damages, and more.

We can represent you with the following claims :
